

Department of Writing Studies (WRS), UGrow Program Fellow

This UGrow opportunity is available to advanced Ph.D. graduate students who have completed the WRS 691 practicum or its equivalent, an exemplary record of teaching writing, an interest in programmatic assessment, and are in good standing in their home department.

The Writing Studies Fellow reports directly to the Chair of Writing Studies and will be responsible for:

1. Contributing to assessment work the department is undertaking in support of continuous improvement
2. Attending the First-Year Writing Practicum (WRS 691) as necessary
3. Supporting other graduate students teaching in WRS
4. Attending and assisting with WRS orientations
5. Attending WRS department meetings as necessary
6. Attending and assisting with guest lecturers as necessary
7. Other duties ad hoc

The assistantship carries tuition remission and the standard stipend and requires 15 hours per week of work.
